Dutch director Sam de Jong features teenagers that hump objects in public and finger a car exhaust or feed it lies latent (dormant) in the body and is reawakened (reactivated) by factors such as stress, sunburn, or fever from a wide range of infectious diseases including colds.

Maybe you could write next articles referring to this article.

This is especially important for women, because statistics show that one in three women will develop osteoporosis (a condition in which bones weaken and become brittle) in their lifetime.